To the Sentencing Judge:

I am writing to plead for your leniency when sentencing Mr. Bevan Cooney of Missoula, Montana.

My name is W. Eric Fulton, and I am a partner here at Fulton Management. I have been an accountant and business manager for almost 30 years and I've been chosen as one of the top business managers in my field by The Hollywood Reporter and Variety magazine for many years. I first started working with Bevan over 10 years ago and during this time he has always shown to be an honest and professional individual. I was originally introduced to him through another client of mine and I've had an opportunity to spend some time with Bevan outside of the office as well. I very much enjoyed spending time with him and feel that he is a man with a good heart and means well in both business and as a friend.

I am aware of the charges that Mr. Cooney has before the court and while it is unfortunate that he has made some bad decisions, I find it difficult to reconcile these charges with the actions of the person I have known. I believe as we move forward, he will emerge into a better individual and it comes as no surprise that he is ready to accept responsibility for his actions.

Mr. Cooney is a father of two and his children need him to be a part of their lives. Despite the current case, I still believe Mr. Bevan Cooney to be a good human being. I do believe that leniency is highly appropriate and encourage the court to make it possible for Mr. Cooney to return to his family as soon as possible. It is my sincere hope that this letter will act as a positive and contributing factor at the time of sentencing.

Thank you for taking the time to read this letter.

Sincerely,
